CALL FOR PAPERS

Three Day International Conference

In today's increasingly interconnected world, the boundaries between language, literature, and culture are becoming increasingly blurred. The rapid advancement of technology, the rise of globalization, and the growing diversity of societies have all contributed to a complex and dynamic landscape in which language, literature, and culture intersect and interact in multifaceted ways.

As we navigate this complex landscape, it is clear that traditional disciplinary boundaries are no longer sufficient to capture the richness and diversity of human experience. Instead, we need to adopt interdisciplinary approaches that can help us to better understand the intricate relationships between language, literature, and culture.

This conference, "Transcending Boundaries: Exploring Interdisciplinary Approaches to Language, Literature, and Culture," aims to provide a platform for scholars and researchers to share their research and experiences on the intersections between language, literature, and culture. By bringing together experts from a range of disciplines, including linguistics, literary studies, cultural studies, and education, we hope to foster a deeper understanding of the complex relationships between language, literature, and culture, and to promote innovative and interdisciplinary approaches to these fields.
